MORGAN AND THE OPERATOR.

The Latter Was Not So Glad to See the General as He Said He Would Be.

The fall of Forts Donelson and Henry compelled General Albert Sydney Johnston to evacuate Kentucky and northern Tennessee. When he retreated from Bowling Green, which had been his headquarters, he left General John H. Morgan, whose audacious enterprise was beginning to attract attention throughout the country, with his brigade of Kentucky and Tennessee horsemen in Kentucky to obtain information of the enemy's movements.

One bright spring morning a tall, graceful looking man rode up to the Louisville and Nashville railroad depot at Bowling Green. Leaving his thoroughbred in charge of a little darkey, the horseman strode across the platform to the telegraph office. He was dressed in an ordinary riding suit, a slouch hat and high riding boots, but there was a martial air about him that would have aroused the suspicion of any one who had ever had anything to do with soldiers. His manner was charmingly affable, and he was soon engaged in conversation with the operator, a tall, thin fellow with a thin, blood mustache.

"What's the news?" he asked.
"Nothing much. Hear that scoundrel Morgan is in the neighborhood cutting telegraph wires and playing hell with our communications. Wish I could run across him. He wouldn't cut any more telegraph wires."

The operator jumped up, and, seizing a horse pistol that lay on the table before him, began to strut up and down the room shaking the weapon at an imaginary Morgan.

The horseman eyed him smilingly for a moment, and then, reaching into his inside pocket, he drew forth a card case, and, taking out a card, handed it to the operator. The operator glanced at the card and suddenly stopped. His eyes bulged, and his knees smote together. Without a word he dropped the pistol and card and fled from the depot. The horseman quietly mounted his horse and galloped off. The card lay on the operator's table near the pistol for an hour. It bore this inscription: "John H. Morgan, C. S. A."—New York Sun.

ADVOCATES SURFACE BURIAL.

Sir F. Seymour Haden Says a Slight Earth Covering Soonest Absorbs Bodies.

Sir F. Seymour Haden of London has practically studied for ten years the best methods of disposing of the dead. The result of his investigations he terms "Nature's method of disposing of the dead, by far the most practical and certainly the natural method."

He has buried animals, large and small, in his lawn. By digging them up and examining them at intervals varying from one to five years he found that, buried at a depth of 4 1/2 feet—the depth required by the government for the burial of human bodies—an interval of from three to four years was necessary for complete dissolution. Buried at the depth of one foot, a year and a half he found was sufficient for the complete dissolution of a large and a year or less for the smaller animals. A body simply laid upon the ground, with a covering of earth a foot thick completely disappeared (bones excepted) in a year.

Dr. A. B. Pease, after experiment, states that if a body is buried so as to further its complete dissolution the land would be ready, after a short interval, to receive a second body, and that if the cemetery were systematically planted with flowers the earth would be purified and the air freshened by the flourishing vegetation.

An acre of ground would prove ample burial ground in perpetuity for a population of 10,000 persons.—New York World.

They Race Balloons In Paris.

The new sport in Paris is the balloon race, which is played in this fashion:

A number of toy balloons are entered for the competition, and in each of them is placed an envelope, containing a postal card, which is addressed to the judge of the contest. The little balloons are then set free, and after more or less time come to earth again in different parts of the country.

Those who find them see the envelopes and notice thereon a request that the time when each balloon was found, and also the place, be written on the postal card, which is then to be dropped in the postoffice.

At the end of a week the various postal cards are compared, and the prize is awarded to that balloon which traveled the greatest distance in the shortest time.—Paris Letter.

Not His Kind of Talk.

"I'll bet you it is," cried Mr. Spark. The argument had reached a most exciting point.

"Put up or shut up," answered Mr. Spark in a common, vulgar way. "Put up or shut up. Money talks."

Mr. Spark sighed.

"It does," he said sadly. "It speaks a language which I can understand, but in which I cannot converse."—Chicago Tribune.

ERIE MEDICAL CO., Buffalo, N. Y.

Why is one woman attractive and another not? It isn't necessarily a question of age or features or intellect. The most admirable and attractive thing about an attractive woman is her womanliness. Everybody admires a womanly woman. Everybody doesn't realize just what it is that makes her womanly. She must have health, of course, because without it she would lose the brightness of her eyes, the fullness of her cheeks and her vivacity. Health brings all these things but health means more than most people think of. Real health must mean that a woman is really a woman. That she is strong and perfect in a sexual way, as well as in every other. That she is capable of performing perfectly the duties of maternity. Upon her strength in this way depends to a large extent her general health, her good looks and her attractiveness. Some women are born stronger than others. Some are born weaker. It is easier for some women to retain health and strength than it is for others. Some seem able to do anything they like, while others, with little serious results. Still, there is no reason why women should not enjoy perfect health. Those who do not, need only take the proper precautions and the property to become perfectly well and strong. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will cure any derangement of the distinctly feminine organism. It is absolutely certain. There are some who have neglected themselves so long that a complete cure is next to impossible, but they can be helped by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It has cured hundreds of women who have received no relief whatever from years of treatment with physicians. It is absolutely unique in the history of medicine. Such a remedy can be discovered only once. There is no other in the world like it, nor has there ever been. Hundreds of things that every woman ought to know, are contained in Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, which will be sent absolutely free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Like every actor, Frank Mayo had experiences not of a pleasant character. This story is one of his early ones, that of his forced resignation from the stock company of Maguire's theater in San Francisco, because, as one of the friends of Rolia in the once popular play "Pizarro," he "cheered too soon. Junius Brutus Booth, the younger, was acting Rolia. The crowd was to cheer at the word 'cheer'—but no such change as they can give us"—but as the word occurred in the same sentence, the enthusiasm of the "super" anticipated his "cue," he leaped into a lucky "landslide" that shook the rafters. The audience and even the actors laughed. The scene was so completely spoiled that the play was run down. Booth was fired. He looked upon the mishap as a disgraceful one and demanded that the youth—Frank was only 18 then—should be discharged from the company. Tom Maguire, always gentle in dealing with the young men of the stage when he had unwelcome news for them, told him that Mr. Booth would leave the theater unless he was discharged. "I leave it to you, my boy," said Maguire, "to decide in this emergency whether the infant stage in California is to lose one of its most brilliant lights." Mr. Mayo used to say with a broad smile that the only consolation that the incident afforded him was the fact that he was called on time early in his career to decide whether he or the star should leave the company.—Buffalo Express.

INFORMATION ASKED AND GIVEN.

A friend writes the JOURNAL as follows from San Francisco:

A goldbug in argument with me today insisted that silver now occupies the same position relatively with gold that it did before the passage of the act of 1873. Will you kindly explain the difference and why it is refused at the mints for coinage? I am for silver 16 to 1, as I was for freedom against slavery.

In 1791 the United States mint was established. The constitution empowers Congress "to coin money and regulate the value thereof." By virtue of that authority Congress made the silver dollar of 371 1/4 grains of fine silver the unit of value, and the words, "One dollar or unit—One hundred cents," were stamped on the coin. Under that and subsequent coinage acts up to 1873 silver was accorded the same privileges as gold at the mint. A person depositing a bar of fine silver at the mint received its value in coins at the rate of $1.2925 per ounce, less charges of mintage. Silver dollars were a legal tender for all debts public and private, in fact the silver dollar was the unit of value.

The act of February 14, 1873, provided that the silver coins of the United States shall be a trade dollar, a half-dollar, a quarter-dollar and a dime, which said coins shall be legal tender at their nominal value for any amount not exceeding five dollars in any one payment, and closed the mints to silver. This eliminated the standard dollar from the list of silver coins and limited the legal tender power of such coins to five dollars. A subsequent act demonetized the trade dollar and by order of the then Secretary of the Treasury—John Sherman—trade dollars were not receivable for any dues and a person could not buy a postage stamp with a bunch of them.

In 1878 Representative Bland of Missouri introduced a bill to restore the coinage of silver, and that bill passed the House of Representatives. The Senate amended the bill by striking out the free coinage clause and providing for the coinage of not less than 2,000,000 nor more than 4,000,000 of standard dollars monthly. The House refused to concur in the Senate amendments, and a conference committee of the two Houses was appointed and agreed upon the Standard Dollar Act of 1878. Mr. Hayes vetoed the bill and it was passed over his veto.

The great differences between the act repealed in 1873 and the act of 1878 are these: Under the act repealed in 1873 the mint coined silver for depositors and silver dollars were a legal tender for all debts public and private. Under the act of 1878 the coinage of silver was limited and the Government purchased all the silver it coined and silver dollars were made a legal tender for all debts when not otherwise specified in the contract. The act of 1878 made silver, which prior to that time had a coinage value of $1.29 per ounce, a merchantable commodity subject to market fluctuations. Since then it has sold as low as 58 cents per ounce and foreign nations buy it and give it a coinage value of $1.33 per ounce.

SAN FRANCISCO BOODLERS.

The grand jury presented seven members of the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco to the Superior Court for removal from office for wilful and corrupt misconduct. The evidence submitted to the grand jury, was not deemed sufficient to warrant an indictment but the jury believed it to be its duty to find a presentment for removal of the "Solid Seven," as the boodlers are called. Since then a great mass meeting has been held in the city to condemn the rascality of the majority of the Board of Supervisors, and new evidence of corruption has been discovered. Supervisor Taylor, who is not a member of the ring, has given the grand jury a clue which is being followed up and may lead to evidence, which will warrant the indictment of every member of the boodle gang.

Mr. Taylor is quoted as saying that a leader in a big corporation told him he had paid money to the boodlers to prevent them from ruining his business, and that he can prove that they accepted bribes.

The "Solid Seven," when fixing rates for the Spring Valley Water Company, valued the company's property at $21,660,000. When the same seven valued the property for assessment purposes they placed it at $3,820,265. The Market Street Railway System, whose stock is at par, and valued at $17,500,000, is assessed for taxable purposes at $5,351,225 by the "Solid Seven," who reduced the valuation of the assessee.

Small corporations and property holders are assessed at about the full value of their property, and the supervisors never think of reducing their assessments, as they are not paid money to do so.

Public sentiment is aroused in San Francisco and the grand jury, which presented the "Solid Seven" for re-moral from office for wilful and corrupt misconduct, will now be able to procure evidence upon which to indict them, so that they may not only be expelled from office, but convicted of bribery as well.

THE SITUATION IN ALABAMA.

An election will be held in Alabama next Monday for State officers. There are two tickets in the field, the Democratic and the Populist. The Republicans have fused with the Populists and are supporting joint candidates. The Populists are white and the Republicans mostly colored. Many of the leading Populists say that if there is not a fair election on Monday they will vote for McKinley and endeavor to give the electoral vote of the State to the gold men next November.

In 1892 the vote of the State for President stood, Cleveland, 133,136; Weaver, 85,181; Harrison, 9,197. In 1894 Oates, the Democratic candidate for Governor, was credited with 110,865 votes, and Kolb, the Populist candidate, with 88,283 votes. The Populists alleged fraud, claimed that Kolb was counted out and for a while trouble was imminent, but Oates was inaugurated. Now the Populists claim accessions to their ranks from the Democratic party and expect with the aid of the Republicans to carry the State next Monday.

TO THE POINT.

In his speech, at the opening of the Republican campaign in Maine, yesterday, Thomas B. Reed said:

When Stephen A. Douglas declared after Sumpter was fired on, that "thenceforth there could be but two parties, patriots and traitors," he won the respect even of foes and an imperishable place in history.

True, Douglas was right, the country applauded, and if the "Little Giant" of Illinois were alive to-day, he would have made use of the same words at the fall of the Republican party at St. Louis, when Marcus Aurelius Hanna turned it over, bound hand and foot, to the Morgans and Rothschilds, to the Wall street brokers and the Lombard street bankers, and labeled it "McKinley."—Sacramento Bee.

The Standard, International and Encyclopedia.

The Standard, International and Encyclopedia are standardly falling behind the courts. One recent decision establishes that when a man is hanged by a mob it is an "accident." A child whose parents are living has also been declared by an eminent judge to be an "orphan," and when life insurance was taken by a man while unmarried it was judicially declared to have been "effected by a husband." In addition to these an unmarried woman has been declared by our highest court to be a "single man."—Exchange

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be recommended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

WEATHER BULLETIN.

Cool Waves and a Series of Severe Storms Predicted.

(Copyright 1911 by Prof. W. T. Foster.

St. JOSEPH, Mo., July 31.—My last bulletin gave forecasts of the storm wave to cross the continent from July 29th to August 23, and August 4th to 8th.

The next will reach the Pacific Coast about the 9th, cross the west of the Rockies country by the close of the 10th, the Great Central valleys 11th to 13th, and the Eastern States 14th.

This storm will be of more than usual force, particularly in the Great Central valleys, and will take a northern route, causing high temperatures in northern and middle latitudes preceding the storm center, and a radical change to cooler immediately following.

The warm wave will cross the West of the Rockies country about the 9th, the Great Central valleys the 11th, and the Eastern States the 13th. Cool wave with a fall of 20 degrees or more, will cross the West of the Rockies country about the 12th, the Great Central valleys the 14th, and the Eastern States the 16th.

The week, August 1st to 7th inclusive will average above normal in the northern parts of the Great Central valleys and about the upper lakes; about or below normal in the southern parts of the Great Central valleys; below in the South Atlantic States and above in the north Atlantic and upper lake States; above on the north Pacific slope and above on the southern Pacific slope.

A series of severe storms on land and sea will run through the remainder of 1896. The worst of these will occur not far from August 12th, September 9th, October 8th, November the 1st or 7th, and December 5th and 29th.

Particulars of these storms will be given in later bulletins. About the dates given will occur the worst weather of the year, including all kinds of disturbances, from the tornado to the blizzard.

Watch these bulletins for the forecasts to the kind of storms each month will bring.

FROM BIGLOW'S DIFFICULTIES. I admire Professor Bigelow for his persistent efforts to make magnetism and meteorology fit the same mold. The trouble with him is that he is trying to do the right thing by a wrong plan of work based on a mistaken theory.

Besides the serious error into which he has fallen in taking the sun as the source of magnetic variations the telegraph and trolley wires are giving him immense trouble. I am not denying that the sun is the great dynamo of the solar system, the great source and center of magnetic power, immensely greater than all the planets combined, but I affirm that the variation in that great force come from planetary influences and not from local causes in the sun's constitution as held by Prof. Bigelow.

If the sun's magnetic force was permanently a hundred times greater than it now is that would have nothing to do with the changes in our weather because it is only the variations from the average force that can affect our earth and atmosphere.

A great enough increase in the magnetic force would evaporate all the waters out of the ocean and surround the earth with permanent cloud belts like those of Saturn, Venus, Jupiter, etc., through which the sun's rays could never penetrate to the earth. That would not stop the rain and snow and wind and storms, for the small variations in the magnetic force, caused by planetary influences, would continue to bring condensations and evaporations.

The magnetic station at San Antonio suspended work, leaving only those at Washington and Toronto upon whose records of magnetism Prof. Bigelow could base his calculations.

Then it was found that the electric wires were interfering with the sun's magnetic influences on the earth. Professor Bigelow says that the vertical magnetic force is seriously affected three miles from the electric wires, and that, to some extent, the influence of the currents on these trolley wires is felt twenty miles away.

Is it not strange that electric currents on a telegraph or trolley wire can affect the magnetic currents from the sun and still the great planet Jupiter, admitted generally to be a magnet, can have no influence on the sun's magnetic forces at the earth?

These orthodox scientists are wearing a web for their own destruction. They will be forced to come to my theory, but they will do this in a way that will give them the credit of finding the true theory of the forces that govern the universe.

Because of the interference of the electric wires with the vertical magnetic force Bigelow has concluded to drop the vertical and depend wholly on the horizontal and direct magnetic forces. The direct is that which comes with the sun's rays, the horizontal is that which pushes the earth around the sun.

THE LANTERN PARADE.

The Reno Wheelmen and Cyclists of Town Present a Magnificent Pageant.

Last night Reno presented a scene almost equalling in magnificence the late carnival parades at Los Angeles and Santa Cruz. The occasion was a grand lantern parade on bicycles under the auspices of the Reno Wheelmen. For days past the boys have been hard at work planning and building floats and decorating their wheels with pretty designs. Other cyclists were invited to participate and they also tried to vie with the wheelmen in original ideas and pretty effects.

Long before 8 o'clock the main streets were crowded with spectators, it being estimated that over 3,000 people viewed the parade. As soon as darkness came the various transparencies, Chinese lanterns and torches were lighted up, and as the silent steeds skimmed along the streets with the many colored lights to the place of rendezvous the crowds of people were kept on the qui vive of anticipation.

Promptly at 8:30 A. L. Helms, the Chief of the Wheelmen, had the bugle sounded and with the assistance of his aides the line was formed with military precision. The procession formed on Sierra street, and at a signal moved up Sierra to Commercial Row, to Virginia street and counter-marched at the Court-house back on Virginia to Commercial Row, thence east to Lake to Plaza, and after passing through some of the streets in the Western Addition marched to Sierra and disbanded.

It was one of the most novel and beautiful sights ever seen in Reno. Over two hundred wheels were in line and extended over five blocks. Hoskins' band was on hand and rendered splendid music.

Many of the floats were superb and expensive, and many of the riders were costumed in pretty and appropriate dresses. A striking feature of the parade was the number of ladies out dressed becomingly in bloomers, and they rode with an ease and precision that was graceful and attractive. Many of the floats received recognition as they passed, in hearty applause from the onlookers.

The big tandem float headed the line and the riders fired roman candles and colored lights as they proceeded, which added greatly to the effect.

Transparencies bearing the inscriptions, "We are for good roads," "Our votes will count at the next election," "10 to 1" "Reno Wheelmen," and other appropriate mottoes were strung along the line.

Charles Becker's float of a two masted schooner under sail was excellent.

Miss Lulu Becker in a handsome bower looked as pretty as a picture.

"Our Jack" Coughlin in Turkish costume attracted much attention by his excellent figure and superb riding. Roy Reese, with a big mortar and pestle, represented Hodgkinson's drug store.

George Fine showed up in a well gotten up design with a big clock high in the air, representing B. Herz, the jeweler.

Fred Morrill and Thermo De La Martyr had their wheels dressed to represent horses and the effect was very good.

A number of comic characters, devils, and other make ups adding variety and amusement were features of the procession.

By far the handsomest and most elaborate float was the one designed by Dr. Phelps. It was circular in form and of tent shape, covered with lanterns of all sizes and colors, and as he rode along the street, by some ingenious arrangement, the whole seemed to revolve or moved about him like a merry-go-round. It was very large and its motion made it no easy job for the doctor to keep it up right.

Altogether the parade was a grand success and all who took part deserve favorable mention, but it was next to impossible to procure all the names last evening.

The parade served to enter in the people and give them something to talk about. Such affairs enliven a town and if Reno had more of them it would be better for her people.

GOLDRUG SCHEMES.

Some of the Methods Proposed to Perpetuate the Gold Standard.

A gentleman who left the Republican party when it declared against free coinage received the following which explains itself:

NEW YORK CITY, July 24, 1896.

Esq., Reno, Nevada.—DEAR SIR:—Knowing you to be a Republican and in favor of maintaining the supremacy of the principles of that party, I address you in confidence. As you are already aware, the Populist granks, aided by a few demagogues who call themselves Democrats, succeeded in controlling the Chicago Convention. I say to you in confidence that ninety per cent of the Patriotic, sound money Democrats in the East will not submit to this outrage and are sure to emphasize their disgust by voting for McKinley. The silver craze has carried hundreds of thousands of our people off their feet, and unless convinced of their error will in all probability vote against us. The most effective way to annul the effect of this craze is to create party prejudices. This the party leaders in the East will push to the utmost.

I understand the situation in Nevada to be a peculiar one. You have four parties; Republican, Democratic, Populist and Silver party. If all these parties can be induced to place separate electoral tickets in the field, it would seem from this distance, to be an easy matter to insure the success of our cause. An effort will be made in every State to accomplish this result and Nevada will not be neglected. It will only be necessary to enlist the services of half a dozen real zealous partisans in each party to accomplish this result. It is the purpose of the National Committee to send an agent into every State at once with this object in view. In the meantime I hope you will bear this in mind, and as far as possible aid the cause. As soon as definite plans have been arranged I will inform you. Very truly,

SPEAKING TO-NIGHT.

Turn Out and Hear Newlands

Representative Newlands, who has been gallantly fighting for the silver cause in the East, will address the citizens at the Opera House at 7:30 o'clock this evening. Mr. Newlands has addressed large audiences at Wells, Elko, Winnemucca and Lovelock, and the people everywhere are enthusiastic for Bryan for President. He will discuss the issues of the campaign and tell the people about the late conventions at Chicago and St. Louis, all three of which he attended, and all three of which nominated Bryan.

Appointment of Delegates.

How is this? Secretary of State Howell calls attention to the fact that in the call for the Silver party State Convention Storey county is allowed 15 delegates and White Pine county 5, when the appointment is based on one delegate for each 50 votes or fraction of that number cast for the Silver party candidate for Governor. The official returns show that Governor Jones received 676 votes for Governor which would entitle it to 14 delegates, and White Pine, which cast 171 votes for Governor Jones, is entitled to three delegates. It is to be hoped the Chairman and Secretary will look into this matter and make the necessary corrections.

Condensed Testimony.

Chas. B. Hood, Broker and Manufacturers Agent, Columbus, Ohio, certifies that Dr. King's New Discovery has no equal as a cough remedy. J. D. Brown, proprietor of St. James Hotel, Fort Wayne, Ind., testifies that he was cured of a cough of two years standing, caused by La Grippe, by Dr. King's New Discovery. B. F. Merrill, Baldwinville, Mass., says that he has used and recommended it and never knew it to fail, and would rather have it than any doctor, because it always cures. Mrs. Hemming, 222 E. 25th street, Chicago, always keeps it at hand and has no fear of cough because it instantly relieves. Free trial bottles at S. J. Hodgkinson's drug store.

District Court.

Judge Cheney filed his decision in the School Trustee contest case of Plinniger vs. Jamison, yesterday. His decision was that S. M. Jamison was elected by one vote. This, it is presumed, will settle the question and the Board of Trustees will stand as now organized.

Coronado Coronado!

Natural mineral water bottled at the springs, near the Hotel Del Coronado, California. H. J. Thyes, State Agent, has received a carload and is now prepared to supply the trade and families cheaper than any mineral water ever placed on this market. All orders promptly attended to. Apr3tf Viavi is more of a food than a medicine. I should be glad to have those who do not understand its use, call and get a Health Book free and read the home testimonials. Viavi sales in 1895 exceeded those in 1894 by half a million dollars. Mrs. B. E. HUNTER, Fourth Street.

PUT UP OR SHUT UP

A Challenge Open to Any Baseball Club in the State

The Silver Star Baseball Club of Virginia City seems to be doing a good deal of talking through their hats about being the champions of the State. If they are such fine players let them send a forfeit to the Evening Gazette, in any amount they want to play for, and it will be immediately covered and a game arranged for. If the Virginia boys don't want to "fish or cut bait," possibly there is another club in the State that wants to play for money. If so, send along your forfeit and it will be covered. A story is related of a farmer who came into a village grocery in one of our western states and exhibited to an admiring crowd an enormous egg about 6 inches long, which was laid by one of his old hens. He had it packed in cotton and wouldn't allow anybody to handle it for fear of breaking the phenomenon. The grocery man examined it with the rest, and, intending to cuff the country man, said, "Pshaw, I've got something in the egg line that will beat that!" "I'll bet you $5 you haven't!" said the country man, getting excited. "Take it up!" said the grocery man, and, leaning behind the counter, he brought out a wire egg beater. "There's something in the egg line that will beat it, I guess," said he, reaching for the beater. "Hold on there!" said the farmer. "Let's see you beat it!" And he handed it to the grocer. The latter held out his hand for it, but dropped it in a hurry on the counter, where it broke two soap plates and a platter. It was of iron, painted white. "Some folks think they are tarnation cates," muttered the farmer as he pocketed the shales and left, "but 'tain't no use buckin' ag'inst the solid facts!"—New York Independent

For Nothing at All.
A young gentleman of 10 had never been to school, but had had his instruction privately at home. On his very first day at school he came home and complained bitterly that the teacher punished scholars for nothing at all. "Have you been punished?" he was asked. "I was shut in a closet for half an hour." "What for?" "I don't know, only I wanted to know something of the teacher. I put my hand—I was very careful to put my hand—and asked her for permission to ask a question." "And what did she say?" "She told me to come to her desk and ask it." "Well?" "And I went to the desk to ask it, but instead of answering it she put me right in the closet!" "Singlar! But did you do anything wrong on the way to the desk?" "Anything wrong on the way? Why, no—oh, the only thing I did was to turn a couple of handsprings!"—Boston Transcript

Depends on the Amount.
"If I ever get hold of Binks, I'll thrash him so that his own mother wouldn't recognize him." "What's the matter?" "He's been slandering me. He says that I beat him out of $5 in a poker game." "Not at all. I heard the remark myself." "Then what did he say?" "He said that you beat him out of $5,000 in a wheat deal." "Oh, well, then, I suppose it's all right. I could hardly believe that he was the kind of man who would go around telling stories that reflected on me in that way."—Chicago Post

When First In Print.
Douglas Jerold, when a young composition in a literary office in London, wrote a criticism on "The Fireside" and dropped it into his employer's letter box. This cost him a sleepless night, but he was recompensed by having his composition handed to him next morning (4 o'clock) complete. His satisfaction of the best result of his work was increased by the general laudation of the house with a copy of "The Fireside" in his hand shouting, "It's a gem! It's a gem!"

A Jenny.
Perhaps some one can now inform us how the word "jenny" came to be universally applied, as it is now, to a small crowbar. It is incorporated into the language and is no longer a thieves' expression. The earliest instance of its use with which I am acquainted occurs in "Neil Cook," in "The Ingoldsby Legends," published originally in Benley's "Miscellany," about 1849.
They call for crow-bars—"jennies" is the modern name for bar and bolt and bar, but what a sight is there!

A Contrary Man.
"The most contrary man I ever knew," said Mr. Stoughton, "was a man who was so contrary that he had to have his watch made to go backward. I never knew how it told the time by it, but it was a satisfaction to know that twice a day it came right in spite of him."—New York Sun.

A Child's Heart.
Among the bizarre articles offered for sale at the Hotel Druot, Paris, was a child's heart immersed in a jar of spirits, and, although 97 years had passed since the organ was placed in its transparent receptacle, every portion of it—the right and left auricle and ventricle, and even a portion of the aortic arch—was in a perfect state of preservation. It was catalogued as the heart of Louis XVII, duke of Normandy, and from the documentary evidence which accompanied it there was little doubt as to its authenticity.—Temple Bar

Digestible Food.
A simple test for digestibility given to a class of nurses, by which one can easily determine if a solid food is one which is proper to give a sick person, is to drop a small piece of it in cold wa-the food is moderately digestible.—New

WEDDING IN NORWAY

AN HONORED GUEST TELLS OF ITS AMUSING FEATURES.

The Spirit of Norway Runs High, and the Festivities Last Until Everybody Is Tired Out—Drinking the Health of the Newly Wedded Pair.

A country wedding in Norway is an interesting sight to behold, and, besides being amusing, I should think, is quite unique in its way. It is not so much the actual church ceremony, although that is strange enough in its simplicity, as the after proceedings which find each charms for the stranger.

When I was traveling in the neighborhood of the great Jostedal glacier, I was invited to join in some wedding festivities, and the privilege of being the honored guest is one I shall not soon forget.

I was rather behind my time, and when I reached the village the good people were returning from the church. The first thing I caught sight of was a troop of gayly dressed men and women collected in the street and marching along to the tune of an antique fiddle. Some were dancing, some were singing, and the older inhabitants, who had reached the age when such frivolities no longer charm, were puffing away at their curious, long, wooden pipes, the old women enjoying the fumes of smoke, if anything, more than the men.

The younger girls were most gorgeously arrayed in snow white caps and massive ornaments of gold. Their dresses were gay with every color of the rainbow. All the musical accompaniment was supplied by one old fiddler, but those simple folk enjoyed the errand squeaking every bit as much as if it had been the finest orchestra in the world under the charge of some celebrated conductor.

The new made wife, covered with blushes, looked sweetly picturesque in her bright red skirt and snow white bodice, and her jewelry tinkled like fairy symbols as she walked or rather gently swayed along.

Her most conspicuous ornament was the bridal crown, which it is the ambition of every village girl to wear. It is the property of the whole parish and is generally under the charge of the priest, who hands it over just before the ceremony. High above the maiden's head it stood, looking most imposing, as the sun glistened on the many jewels which were set around it.

I joined the merry throng, the men raising their caps and the women courtesying low when they caught sight of me. Then I followed the party up some narrow steps to the first floor of a big thatched barn belonging to the father of the bride. An old oak chair was dragged forward to receive my portly person, and I sat me there and wondered greatly what on earth was coming next.

The villagers ranged themselves round the long, low room, on one side the girls, opposite them the young men, the matrons at the top and the elders at the bottom. Then the bride retired, of course accompanied by her husband, and seated her coronation garments for lighter attire. I thought her wise when I saw what followed.

When the pair returned—and during their absence there was silence in the barn—a huge bowl was offered to me filled with the national beverage. I looked at it aghast. Was I to drink it all? They intimated I was to wish them health. I touched it with my lips. Then the bride bent her pretty head and took a sip. That one taste was enough for me. But there was more to come.

They signed that I was to go on drinking. I shut my eyes and did so. Between every two draughts the bride bowed her head and courtesied before me. At last it seemed I might leave off. But, no; I had to go through it all again with the bridegroom until the bowl was empty. And when that time came I was heartily glad, for the drink was strong, and a lifelong for it is most surely one that could only be acquired by long acquaintance.

And now the bride had her bride into the middle of the room and tripped one of those graceful pasdoux peculiar to the country.

At last, hot and flushed, they stopped and stood before me. A tiny silver cup, held out, and I was asked to drink their health again, this time in cognac. I did so without daring to think of the result.

This was the signal for the dancing to commence in earnest. Only four people—two men and two women—were allowed to dance at one time, but as soon as they stopped, exhausted, others slipped in and took their places, and the old fiddler swayed away until I thought his arm must break.

Presently there was a lull. Two women, dressed in gauzy, wavy dresses, stepped into the middle. They were the village dancers. Then followed a marvelous exhibition of high kicking. It was a veritable triumph in the terpsichorean art, for every few steps they touched the ceiling with their shoes, and the louder the click of their shoes the louder came the applause. And so the night hours slipped away unheeded. Dance followed dance and song followed song, until at last they could keep awake no longer, and, with a kiss to the bride and the bridegroom, one and all departed.—Hartford Times

The Value of a Cup.
One of the most comforting things a fisherman or hunter can carry with him is a cup to drink from. Some men get along with their hands, or by leaning over a stream or spring and drinking direct from the water, but there is no comfort, and there is a possibility of hazards in this. One likes to stand erect and drink comfortably when on the march. It is more satisfactory. When one forgets his cup, he makes one from the large leaves of a tree or bush, or from paper, or uses the top of his hat.—New York Sun.

Amateur Photography.
"It was generally thought two or three years ago," remarks the Syracuse Post, "that amateur photography would die out, as has many another craze, but the reverse has been the case. Although there is not the fad wave over it that there formerly was, more people have yielded to its fascinations during the last year than ever before." It is doubtless true that photography is not the fad today that it once was. The kodak fad is not so commonly seen as was the case a few years ago, and of course the bicycle must bear the burden of the craze's loss of popularity. Nevertheless there is something so fascinating about photography that it is hardly probable that it will ever die out until some new and better way of reproducing the face of nature is discovered. Those persons who adopted the camera just because their neighbors had given it up, as might have been expected. These same people will eventually grow tired of the bicycle or of anything else. Novelty is what they seek, and as soon as the newness wears off the thing has no further attractions. But for persons who have a taste that way photography is even a novelty. There is always some new process to try, some new experiment to make, and the real enthusiasm never wears of his camera. The amateurs are largely responsible for the great progress made in photography, and it is a fact that until the amateur entered the field the professionals know only the rudiments of their art. The real camera "crank" is not satisfied to always follow. He must experiment and seek to produce new effects, and it is this possibility of invention and discovery that constitutes the greatest charm of the pastime.—Troy Times.

Cigars in England.
"Englishmen and Americans differ in many things," said the observant to bacconist, as he handed over six waitanted Havanas to his customer. "I don't refer to their ideas on democracy or monarchy, it's the little things I notice particularly, those connected with my own business. Did you ever notice an Englishman choosing a cigar? He always puts it to his ear and squeezes it between his forefinger and thumb. He does that to see if it will crackle. If it does he will more than likely take it. An Englishman likes a dry cigar, the drier the better, while the American prefers his damp. If you asked for a damp cigar in London the storekeeper would think either that you were joking—a thing to which he has a rooted objection—or that it was your first smoke, in which case he probably would try to palm off a twopenny cabbage as a straight Havana. Those tricks are not confined to this side of the ocean."

"Here we keep our cigars in a damp place. Over there, where about everything is soaking, they keep them in the driest spot they can find. They even go so far as to say that no man who lives by the sea can have decent cigars. I suppose it's natural. When a man's dry he always wants something wet, and vice versa. Perhaps if I had the misfortune to live on a foggy island I'd want my cigars like tender!"—New York Sun.

Verbal Incoherence Rebuked.
One evening recently I chanced to have business with an Alameda official and called at his residence. He habitually dothed his official position with all the pomp it would carry, and occasionally he strayed it a little.

He had lately been presented with a big brass piano lamp, with a yellow shade, and it was standing in the very center of the parlor floor. The official had called attention to the new lamp by turning it up and down half a dozen times, but still his son felt that it was not attracting the attention of which such a beautiful lamp was deserving, so he blurted out:

"Don't yer think it's the beautiful-est lamp yer ever seen?"

The official swelled up with indignation, and, scowling fiercely, reproved his son in the sternest manner:

"Too them words is incoherant!"

For your Protection.—Catarrh "Cure" or Tonic for Catarrh in liquid form to be taken internally, usually contain either Mercury or Iodide of Potassa, or both, which are injurious if too long taken. Catarrh is a local, not a blood disease, caused by sudden change to cold or damp weather. It starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat. Cold in the head causes excessive flow of mucus, and, if repeatedly neglected, the results of catarrh will follow: severe pain in the head, a running sound in the ears, bad breath, and sometimes an offensive discharge. There must be quick relief to allay inflammation and heal the membrane. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles and contains no mercury nor any injurious drug. Price, 50 cents.
